In Q2 2026, we forecast revenue growth of 23% y/y to approximately PLN 15.9m. The lower-than-previously-assumed growth rate reflects the slower commercialisation of MIC tests and the protracted armed conflict in the Middle East, which is one of the target markets for the company's new product. By segment, we forecast revenue of approximately PLN 10.24m in microbiology, representing growth of 8.8% y/y. In Q1 2026, the segment generated revenue of PLN 8.87m. At the same time, our model assumes that revenue in the analytics segment will increase to PLN 5.12m, up 57.6% y/y. We note that the Q2 2025 comparison base was exceptionally low due to one-off factors, while the segment generated revenue of PLN 4.8m in Q1 2026.

Based on our revenue assumptions, we expect BioMaxima's Q2 2026 results to confirm a continued, gradual recovery in performance. According to our estimates, the company may report EBITDA of approximately PLN 1.66m for the period, compared with PLN 0.477m in Q2 2025. Following the publication of the Q2 2026 results, LTM EBITDA should, based on our simulations, reach approximately PLN 5.8m, representing growth of 15.3% y/y. In Q2 2026, we expect net profit of approximately PLN 0.44m. On an LTM basis, this would translate into net profit of PLN 0.885m, up 26.3% y/y.

We also highlight the current report dated 17 July 2026, according to which Asakura announced an invitation to submit offers to sell up to 800,000 BioMaxima shares, representing approximately 19% of the company's share capital, at PLN 10.50 per share. The offer acceptance period ends on 4 August 2026, with settlement scheduled for 12 August 2026. We interpret the invitation to sell shares as an attempt to consolidate BioMaxima's shareholder base by an entity affiliated with the company's current management and a major shareholder.

The strengths and weaknesses of the valuation methods used in the report:

DCF – the most popular and the most effective of the valuation methods - it is based on the discounting of future cash flows generated by the company. The disadvantage is the high sensitivity to changes in the basic financial parameters forecast in the model (interest rates, exchange rates, profits, residual value).

DDM – the method is based on discounting future cash flows from dividends. The advantage of the valuation is the inclusion of future financial results and cash flows from dividends. The main disadvantages are the high sensitivity to changes in the basic financial parameters forecasted in the model (capital cost, profits, residual value) and the risk of changing the dividend payment policy.

Comparative – the method is based on current and forecasted market multipliers of companies from the industry or related industries, which better than DCF shows the current market situation. The main disadvantages are the difficulty in choosing the right companies for comparison, the risk of ineffective valuation of companies compared at a given moment, as well as high volatility (along with price fluctuations).

Explanation of ratings:

Buy – we believe that the security will reach the target price in the recommended period, which significantly exceeds the current market price (at least + 15%);

Accumulate – we believe that the security will reach the target price in the recommended period, which exceeds the current market price (in the range of +5 to + 14.99%);

Hold – we believe that a security in the recommended period will fluctuate around the target price, which is close to the current market price (in the range from -4.99% to + 4.99%);

Reduce – we believe that the security will reach the target price in the recommended period, which is lower than the market price (range of decline from 5% to 14.99%);

Sell – we believe that a security in the recommended period will reach the target price, which is significantly lower than the market price (suggested erosion of the value exceeds 15%).

Target price – the theoretical price which, in our opinion, should reach a security in the recommended period; This price is the result of the company's value (eg based on DCF, comparative and other valuations), market conditions and the industry as well as other factors subjectively considered by the analyst.

An investor should be aware that each investment decision in the capital market is subject to numerous risks that finally can result in a financial loss suffered by him. The return rate on individual investments can fluctuate depending on various factors beyond the control of the investor. Therefore, a customer who makes a single investment decision should not only check currency and correctness of individual assumptions made by the analyst in the report but also to have an independent assessment and own analysis (also based on scenarios other than the ones presented in the report) taking into consideration the level of acceptable risk. When deciding on activity on the capital market the Investor should take into consideration the fact that the investment portfolio structure (diversification of investment through possessing more than one financial instrument) can reduce risk exposure to an individual instrument bringing a negative rate of return in a given period. At the same time, however, it can lead to limitation of a positive rate of return the investor could achieve in the case of a single financial instrument in a given time period. The investor should be aware that the investment portfolio structure and any investment strategy for the stock market do not guarantee the achievement of a positive rate of return and do not protect him against final loss.
